RICHARD RANDOLPH

Contemporary and Smooth Jazz Saxophonist, Richard Randolph, a native of Youngstown, Ohio, Co-Founder of Columbus-based Smooth Jazz Band, NexLevel, and Saxophonist of UrbanJazzCoalition, has such versatility and finesse that captures your soul at the very first note.

Richard is no stranger to the jazz scene and has worked as professional saxophonist for more than 40 years.

However, Changing Lanes is Richard's first foray into the solo scene and is the culmination of decades of dedication to the craft. His skilled ability has allotted him a wide experience of playing with artists of many disciplines, and his sound has no limitation from soul-jazz, R&B, and funk.

He continues his onward journey of music mastery, with his debut single release "Changing Lanes," written by Richard and produced by chart topping guitarist/producer, Adam Hawley.

“Jazz has always been one of my first loves and has been a constant in my professional and personal life,” Richard Randolph

MORE ABOUT RICHARD

Richard Randolph was born in Youngstown, Ohio, and currently lives in Louisville, Kentucky, with his lovely wife Carmen. He has two children, Tiffany and Richard, II (Aaron) and three grandchildren, Gabriella, Kenton and Terence.

He picked up a saxophone at the age of twelve and contributes his first taste of the true essence of music from his eldest sister, Dr. Charsie Randolph-Sawyer, Emeritus Professor of Music at Calvin College, along with his humble beginnings in the church. Richard has been playing the saxophone since childhood, where his love of music began from his upbringing in the church.

His musical styling is inspired by multiple genres, including Gospel, Soul, and R&B; but particularly by jazz greats, the likes of John Coltrane, Cannonball Adderley, Gerald Albright, Everette Harp, Kim Waters, Marion Meadows, the late greats Grover Washington, Art Porter, and the list goes on.
